Our steadily increasing counter and delivery trade is just one straw.

It's a conclusive proof of the goodness of our goods. If our Groceries, Fancy Fruits and Vegetables, were not so good as we say they are, the patrons who blow into our store daily would be blowing into some other store.

We attribute quite a proportion of our success to the unusual goodness of our Groceries. By handling nothing but what is first class.

Seeking Health on the Edge of Nature's Greatest Chasm

While Physical Defects Are Discussed by Healthseekers, Beauty Lovers Find Grandeur Abundant.

By NORMAN M. WALKER.

THE Grand Canyon—"A poem, a painting, a piece of exquisite music." Press agent stuff.

Also a homeopathic, allopathic and faith cure resort for folk suffering from all manner of imaginary ills as it from as many real ones.

More people are flocking to the canyon to see the wonder of the world's most sublime scenery than to see the Grand Canyon.

It may be that many have company and there is always a crowd of company at the canyon. The explanation of a guide, who says that people come there to get food questions, the sicker they are, the more foolish the questions. As a last and final explanation, old John Hance advances the theory that Indians, best and true, come to the canyon of the Colorado because no scenic artists have ever mastered sufficient courage to paint the canyon.

Whatever it is that draws them there, they are there in crowds, flocks, herds and individually. They occupy the seats in front of El Tovar and talk with knees and indignation, as if defying the command of nature to bow and worship at her beautiful handwork. The business of bending the knee is none too good, with a touch of rheumatism in this same knee. Instead of worshipping, they argue and talk of treatments, diets and divers other remedies for the cost of high living.

Indians Appreciative.

It is sacrilegious this mocking at mother nature's prize offering. There it is in all of its grandeur just as the Indians found it centuries ago. It is a fierce indictment against the American people that they should let an unwashed and uncivilized Indian beat them to an appreciation of the wonderful work of the elements. There is no small talk around the hogans of the Indians who live on the canyon rim. Their comments are made in whispers that are as musical as the tourists' voices are strident.

A Hopi stood on Rowe's point the night of the gorgeous sunset, his arms folded and gazing off across the misty chasm, impressed with the conglomeration of colors and mists as the maples on the benches were with their own importance.

The Riot of Color Revealed.

While that old Indian descendant of a race which had discovered the canyon and settled down in Hopiland to enjoy its beauty forever, stood on the rocky point, outlined against a crimson sky, the veil of mist lifted and the riot of color was revealed for a minute as the sun slipped down behind the pine trees, the sun was burning and the sun of ages, delicate shades and tints of blue which poured from behind the pyramidal cliffs and filled the gorge with a rainbow of colors.

Then the first faded in succession, the browns and dark reds clinging to the turrets and spires until the mist curtains lowered and the moon burst from the after glow like the ghost of the sunken sun and revealing the shadows which the sun had painted across the floor of the abyss, shed its death pall over the canyon.

Bird Walks Death of Day.

A night bird in the pine woods wailed a dismal plaint all through the day. From the porches of the canyon hotel came the voices of the worshippers at the shrine of the infinite.

"No, I have never tried Mudrika, but think massage will help my knee."

The dramatic took six poison tablets and the primitive man shuffled and mumbled in his aboriginal tongue what must have meant in plain United States "Can you beat that?"

BEE STINGS KEEP OFF THE RHEUMATISM

Preacher Says He Is 75 and Has Never Had the Disease Because He Has Always Handled Bees.

Winsted, Conn., Oct. 19.—Rev. John Dooley, a Congregational minister of Great Harrington, Mass., who has kept bees for 50 years, said here today: "I society were constituted on the principle of the beehive there would be no millionaires, no paupers, and no criminals. Because everybody would work for the community as the bees do."

The Rev. Mr. Dooley is 74, a veteran of the Civil war, and has never suffered with rheumatism, because, he explains, bee stings have kept the rheumatism away.
